Profile

Arianna joined Gilbert Walker after completing a judge's clerkship at the Supreme Court of New Zealand. At the Court she gained a broad range of experience across civil and criminal matters.

Arianna graduated as the top law student in her class at the University of Auckland, receiving numerous academic awards and placing first in a range of subjects. During her studies, Arianna undertook internships at two leading law firms and worked as a research assistant and land law tutor. She has also worked as a teaching fellow within Victoria University of Wellington's law faculty.

Arianna has been recognised for her success in various mooting and alternative dispute resolution competitions, including winning the International Chamber of Commerce International Commercial Mediation Competition. She has also undertaken research and published in the area of climate litigation.
